Re: NYS IG 0165-316-2019

Dear Acting Commissioner Annucci:

On January 7, 2019, the New York State Department of Corrections and Community Supervision (DOCCS) alleged to the Offices of the New York State Inspector General that Jessica Pigeon-Wyant, an office assistant 2 assigned to DOCCS's Support Operations Unit, may have submitted to DOCCS fraudulently altered medical documentation.

The Inspector General investigated this allegation and found that a medical note submitted by Pigeon-Wyant to DOCCS had been altered. Further, the investigation found circumstantial evidence that Pigeon-Wyant was responsible for this alteration. The following is a summary of the Inspector General's investigative findings.

The investigation found that in or around December 2018, Pigeon-Wyant submitted a medical note to DOCCS, which was dated December 13, 2018, and excused her absence from work until February 13, 2019. The medical note, written on an official New York State prescription form, was from the office of Dr. [REDACTED]. However, upon initial inspection at DOCCS, it appeared the medical note had been altered to extend Pigeon-Wyant's return to work date one additional month, from January 13, 2019 to February 13, 2019.

DOCCS Office of Special Investigations reviewed the note and obtained a sworn statement from the individual who prepared the note on behalf of Dr. [REDACTED] office. The statement read that the original medical note was prepared by a member of Dr. [REDACTED] administrative staff with his authorization; the return to work date of the original note had been January 13, 2019; and the note had been subsequently altered without the knowledge or authorization of Dr. [REDACTED] changing the return to work date to February 13, 2019.

The Inspector General obtained sworn testimony from Pigeon-Wyant in which she acknowledged submitting the medical leave note to DOCCS but claimed she neither altered the original note nor knew who had. Further, Pigeon-Wyant testified that she received a second medical leave note from a different medical practitioner that excused her from work for the period January 13, 2019 through March 2019. The Inspector General verified the existence and validity of this second note.

Additionally, the Inspector General reviewed Pigeon-Wyant's employment history with New York State and found numerous time and attendance issues. Indeed, Pigeon-Wyant's probationary employment period with DOCCS was extended on multiple occasions due to her frequent absences and she was counseled several times while on probation regarding her absenteeism. Further, Pigeon-Wyant's employment history revealed that in 2016, she was terminated from a position with the New York Department of State due to excessive absences during her probationary period at the agency.

Notably, DOCCS advised the Inspector General that Pigeon-Wyant resigned from DOCCS, effective July 4, 2019.

If you require further information, please contact Deputy Inspector General James R. Davis at 518.474.1010.

Sincerely,
